WINTER IN SEBASTOPOL. Russian Ludies and their Furs - A Russian

Quadrille, de. SEBASTOPOL, January, 1858.-The winter season here is so much more beautiful than we acticis ated, that when the storms come we endure them patiently, knowing that the clouds will soon disappear and the sun again shine as brightly as before. Hail and snow are not very common here-the rain predominates. Two weeks since there was quite a storm of rain, hail and snow; the latter quite covered the ground, and did not melt away for two days. On another occasion the snow lasted only four or five hours. We have heavy winds occasionally during the winter. and the month of March. In April the pleasant, settled weather begins, and continues till November or December. Although the weather is usually so mild at this season, ladies and gentlemen wear the Russian winter costume, dressing as warmly as if they were in St. Petersburg. Some of our lady friends wear magnificent cloaks, which are very large and long, extending to the feet .-The outside material is composed of marcon velvet or black satin; the cloaks are lined and Low's Honey do. For sale by with rich sable or fox fur. Last winter the J. WILLIAM BOWLING, color most in favor with the ladies was sky blue. Large sable collars are also much worn, and with a cloak, often cost one or two thousand dollars, and in some instances even more than the sum named. The officers of the army wear loose grey coats hued with fur, and wide fur collure; and the officers of the pavy wear black coats lived with fur.

The large hall where our weekly assemblies are held, was used during the war for a hospital, and was the only building not injured by the Allies. They took care to preserve it on being informed for what purpose it was devoted. Sometimes there were to be seen upon the floors many hundreds of French, Russian and English soldiers, borribly matilated. The French soldiers were always attended to first, and supplied with the best linen. When any of the Allies were wounded and brought into the Russian bespitals, they were no longer considered as enemies, but were treated as guests. In the French history of the war, the author says: "For the tender care bestowed upon our soldiers during the war, the Russians are deserving of world-wide praise." From the English accounts one would form quite a different opinion. It is true, however, that the French | and for sale by had the preference; yet the English were kindly cared for, notwithstanding the aversion which the Russians had towards them.

I will mention some of the customs of the ball room. In the Russian quadrilles a circle is formed around the room, and seats are laced behind each person, in which they placed behind each person, in which they can rest and chat after each figure is danced. The first six figures are always danced alike, or rather, there are six regular figures, (each one different, of course,) which are always danced first, and the remaining ones can be changed to suit the pleasure of whosoever may take the lead. After the first quadrille, fruits, preserves, jellies, sweetmeats, &c., are provided in one of the drawing-rooms, for the ladies and gentlemen to partake of whenever they feel inclined; and in the course of the evening a grand supper is prepared .- Corr. of Boston Transcript.

AN AMERICAN MINISTER'S BALL. The grand ball given by Mr. and Mrs. Mason, at Paris, on the 22d, in commemoration of Washington's birth-day, was a brilliant and Stabler's old stand, Nos 5 & 7, south Fairfax st. most satisfactory fele. Invitations had been extended to the friends of the minister and his family, and it was estimated that not The earliest and most solid heading Early and and a Gazette. a newspaper published in the less than eight hundred persons were crowdCabbage known, large and heavy, received, and city of Alexandria, once a week for four suced into the saloons of the Legation. Lord for sale by Cowley, English Embassador: Count Kisseleef, Russian Embassador; and the Duke De Mala-koff were early in attendance. The widow of School, composed of the Phosphates of Lime. the late Solomon Rothschild and the Chevalier Wykoff were among the numerous notabili- by ties present on the occasion. The supper, the orchestra, and the entire arrangements, were perfect, and did honor to the liberality and the good taste of the minister and his amiable family. American beauty, making an important subtraction in favor of two Mexican belles, shone, as usual, with great credit to the country.

MINISTERS' WIVES.

One of our exchanges proposes the some what alarming inquiry, "whether ministers' wives are as long lived as those of other men?" It mentions, as an instance, that the wives of twelve ministers of its acquaintance "died young," and several years' observation goes to confirm the impression that ministers' wives generally die prematurely. Another newspaper, in taking up the subject, says that in addition to the ordinary domestic duties of ministers' wives, a large part of the duties discharged by the busband in other callings, is necessarily devolved upon them; moreover, the financial embarrassments which so frequently press upon a ministers's family, tend to touch the keenest susceptibilites of the wife.
